Bali disease outbreak threatens rural devastation in Australia

Foot and Mouth disease in communities has been detected in Bali, the closest it has ever come to Australia, and the government has warned an outbreak here could cost the economy up to $80 billion.

The highly contagious foot and mouth disease spread through Indonesia to the holiday island, the federal Agriculture Department confirmed on Tuesday, prompting urgent warnings for travellers in a desperate attempt to stop them from bringing the livestock disease home with them.

The disease spreads among livestock either as an airborne disease or through contaminated feed, faeces and even clothing. It does not infect humans but a visitor to Bali who goes near a farm animal could bring the disease home on their clothes or shoes.

Frontline biosecurity officers are inspecting flights from the island, the department confirmed.

“Australia has strict biosecurity protocols in place to prevent high-risk materials, such as contaminated equipment or clothing, animals and animal products, being brought in by travellers who may have been exposed to diseased animals,” the department said in a statement.

An outbreak of the disease, which causes painful lesions on cloven-hoofed animals including sheep, cattle, pigs and goats would wreak a devastating toll on farmers, not least because infected animals are destroyed to halt the spread of the infection.

General Manager of agricultural think tank the Australian Farm Institute, Katie McRobert said the UK’s experience with the disease showed that an outbreak would cause “massive impact from a deeply traumatic experience” in Australia’s rural communities.

The UK’s foot and mouth outbreak in 2001 forced the destruction of more than 6 million pigs, cows and sheep at an estimated cost of £8 billion.

Australia’s industry is much bigger than the UK, with the beef industry worth $20 billion a year and sheep $7 million.

“You can still talk to farmers today in the UK, all these years later, who tell you about the burning pits, the stench across the landscape, the immense distress this caused and the ongoing pall cast over the entire farming community,” Ms McRobert said.

Australian farmers across vast districts could be forced to cull their herds and re-enter lockdowns just months after the COVID-19 pandemic. State-controlled biosecurity laws have sweeping powers that could bar livestock and feed from being transported across borders and between local government areas.

Authorities are already scrambling to control of an outbreak of the deadly varroa mite, which kills European honeybees, after it broke out from the Newcastle port.

Previous outbreaks of varroa mite in New Zealand and the US saw the numbers of beekeepers fall by half and Ms McRobert said a foot and mouth disease would be a “double punch for the Australian agricultural industry”.

“Biosecurity departments are already stretched to try and limit the first incursion, let alone a second incursion of this magnitude. Varroa won’t just hit beekeepers but all the pollination services, which flows on into our cropping industries and horticulture industries. To have another disease outbreak in the livestock sector would be almost unthinkable.”

Foot and mouth is endemic on the Asian continent and it arrived on Java in May. Farmers have since then been pleading with governments to throw any resources they can muster at preventing an outbreak. An outbreak could force a ban on red meat exports that lasts for years. The federal government estimated in 2013 that a large outbreak could cost the economy up to \$80 billion – the equivalent of the combined gross product of Tasmania and the ACT.

National Farmers Federation president Fiona Simson called on travellers to be vigilant when returning to Australia.

“Australians have done the right thing through COVID, taking precautions to stop the spread ... our farmers now need travellers to treat the threat of foot and mouth disease with the same amount of caution.

NSW Farmers chairman of biosecurity Ian McColl called on the federal government to urgently fix biosecurity screening “before it was too late”.

“It is clear that there are gaps in the system, because Varroa mite reached our shores and evaded detection.

“Good luck – not good management – seems to be the only thing keeping biosecurity threats out of Australia.

Ranger:🐾 What not to give your dog 🐾

It can be tempting to give our dogs sneaky leftovers or share our food with them, but it is important to remember that certain foods that are safe for humans can be harmful to canines. Because dogs have a different metabolism, feeding human food to them can be extremely dangerous, and even poisonous.

Below is a list of common foods that can be harmful to dogs and why.

🐾 Avocados – dangerous partly due to a fungicidal toxin called Persin. Only High doses are lethal 🐾 Apples – The flesh of an apple is not toxic, however the seeds can be poisonous due to a compound called Amygdalin. It must be consumed in large quantities and chewed to be toxic.

🐾 Garlic – Can be fatal to dogs due to a compound called Thiosulfate that damages red blood cells. It takes a lot of Garlic to cause toxicity, but some breeds can be particularly sensitive.

🐾 Macadamia Nuts – In general, nuts are not good for dogs, especially macadamia nuts. These are ranked as the most toxic, which can lead to vomiting, weakness, hyperthermia, and loss of bodily functions.

🐾 Mustard – It won't be lethal in small doses; however it can be toxic in higher amounts.

🐾 Artificial Sweeteners (xylitol) – This is a sugar alternative found in human foods such as candy and baked treats. It's extremely toxic to dogs and can cause rapid insulin release that can put them in a coma within 15-20 minutes.

🐾 Chocolate – This one is more commonly known to be toxic to dogs. Chocolate contains a stimulant called Theobromine which is poisonous to dogs. It mainly affects the gut, heart, central nervous system and kidneys.

🐾 Onions – The same as garlic, Onions also contain Thiosulfate which is toxic to dogs.

🐾 Cooked bones – Although not poisonous or toxic, cooked bones pose a risk to dogs due to splintering and in large doses can cause constipation or perforation.

🐾 Grapes and Raisins – These rank the most serious food threats for dogs. Small amounts can even cause sudden kidney failure, and more commonly cause vomiting and diarrhea.

ARMPIT SURPRISE

The sudden appearance of a hound's nose and/or head under one's armpit.

Typically occurs at mealtimes, but can occur at any opportunity when food is being consumed by a human.

🐾 Potatoes – Are toxic for dogs due to them containing Solanine. It blocks a chemical called Acetylcholine which dogs need to transmit nerve impulses. This can result in issues with the nervous system and intestinal tracts.

🐾 Peaches – The peach flesh itself is fine for dogs however the pit contains amygdalin, the same substance in apple seeds.

🐾 Leeks – Also contain Thiosulfate, the same compound in Garlic and Onions. These are all foods part of the allium family.

NAIDOC Celebrations:

What a fantastic fortnight it has been at The Kodja Place Cultural Centre with over 600 people (mainly children) taking part in our events. It is impossible to select just one highlight so here are just a few of the more special memories:

Number one has to be Billy's Tours which captivated children of all ages, from 3 year olds enthralled with his book reading to 13 and 14 years olds mesmerised by his yarning over Hot Johnnies and Milo in the Mia Mia's. What a hero he is and Billy has undoubtedly become the face of Kodja Place.

His tours are free for people who live in Kojonup and $12.50 for adults or $6 for children and concessions for those living elsewhere. Enjoy Billy Tea or Milo with Damper/Hot Johnnies around the fire in the Mia Mia's for $5.

Talking of Hot Johnnies Cheryl Michael was a star and joined us every single morning throughout school NAIDOC celebrations to make hundreds of Hot Johnnies which were enjoyed with honey and milo by pupils, staff and visitors alike. Here's Cheryl being helped by Jessie and Matu on a particularly busy day. Many thanks to you for giving so much of your time as did Ronice Blair and Caroline Pool who supervised the children's activities which were well received.

NAIDOC week is held annually in the first week of July to celebrate and recognise the history, culture and achievements of Aboriginal and Torres Islander peoples.

'Cultural and Creative Expressions' Art Exhibition sponsored by The Rotary Club of Kojonup 27th June 31st July

This critically acclaimed exhibition has been an unbelievable success not only for those involved in producing the amazing work featured, but for the many additional visitors it has brought into The Kodja Place, both locally and from much further afield. Everyone has been bowled over by the standard of work produced by our local schools. We would like to thank the judges chaired by Jill Capper from Aura Gallery, Bonnie who represented The Rotary Club and Cheryl Michael, all of whom had a very tough time sorting out the winners from a field of wonderful exhibits.

We would also like to thank The Rotary Club of Kojonup for sponsoring the event and providing the frames which can be re-used for future exhibitions as well as Lisa Martello Hart, who in her capacity as a volunteer at Kodja Place donated 6 months of her time to KDHS students to produce and curate this incredible exhibition. Thank you, Lisa, for your time, dedication, enthusiasm, passion and stamina.

The winners of the prizes for sponsored Art Exhibition were as follows:

Winner: Collaborative Piece 'Our Place' Students of KDHS Years 8 and 9

Individual Winner: Imogen Layman-Palmer 'The Birthing Tree'

Highly Commended: Tyler Thomson 'Bird in Tree'

Commended: Sonny Potaka-Osbourne-Wihongi 'The Shearing Shed'

Levi Hunter 'The Birthing Tree'

Collaborative 'Personalities'

The Great News is that you still have time to catch it! Come and see for yourself why so many people have enjoyed the exhibition.

A Celebration of Volunteering Event:

70 amazing guests joined us at The Kodja Place Cultural Centre for soft drinks and canapés on Thursday 7th July. What a great way to say thank you to members of our community who selflessly and enthusiastically devote their time for the good of the community. What was also clear from the evening is just how much fun volunteering is and the enjoyment people actually get from it. If you would like to join our Volunteer Team at The Kodja Place please call Jill or Kristel on 98310500

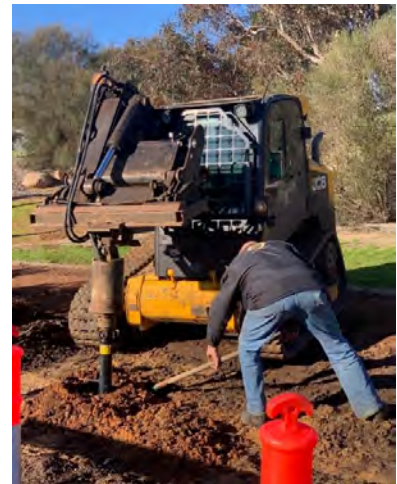

Work Placement Students:

We have been very pleased to welcome Manny Fleay and Sunny Potaka-Osborne-Wihonga to help us at the Kodja Place as part of KDHS Work Experience programme. They were a credit to themselves, their parents and their school and were bright, cheerful and prepared to join in and take part in whatever was asked of them. We thank them and KDHS for their help and participation.

Sinking of The Rotary Time Capsule:

This marked the end of an exceptionally busy week at The Kodja Place and left many of us 'oldies' pondering whether we would actually be around to see it being opened in 2050, which was quite surreal. The capsule has pride of place and will mark the new entrance being constructed from the courtyard into The Australian Rose Maze. A group of young people from St Bernard's and KDHS helped to fill in the surrounding gaps and we hope that they will be able to help remove it from its new home in 2050.

Word of the Day

culminate (verb | KUL-muh-nayt)

Definition: (intransitive verb 1) of a celestial body : to reach its highest altitude also : to be directly overhead

(2) a : to rise to or form a summit b : to reach the highest or a climactic or decisive point transitive verb : to bring to a head or to the highest point

Did You Know? When a star or other heavenly body culminates, it reaches its highest point above the horizon from the vantage point of an observer on the ground. Culminate was drawn from Medieval Latin culminare, meaning “to crown,” specifically for this astronomical application. Its ultimate root is Latin culmen, meaning “top.” Today, the word’s typical context is less lofty: it can mean “to reach a climactic point,” as in “a long career culminating in a prestigious award,” but it can also simply mean “to reach the end of something,” as in “a sentence culminating in a period.”

ANOTHER "FIND" AT OLD BARRACKS

Every busy bee held at the old barracks by the Kojonup Historical Society seems to unearth more articles of historical value.

During the busy bee last Saturday, Mr Don Tunney found a well preserved metal container once used to pour gunpowder into a musket. The container still held a quantity of gunpowder.

Further plans for the restoration of the old barracks as an historical museum will be discussed at the next Society meeting in the Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, June 17. It is hoped there will be a good attendance present.

The first chapter of "The History of Jingalup," compiled by Mr Anthony Barker will be read during the meeting.

A very comprehensive study of Jingalup's history, Barker's project also includes many old photographs, and any persons wishing to hear the reading are invited to attend the meeting.

The Society has received many requests from the newly formed Australian Institute of Aboriginal Studies in Canberra, for details of old tribal grounds, relics, customs and legends of the original Kojonup natives.

Anyone with information they think may be of use is asked to contact the Society secretary, Mrs M. Bignell.

The type of information wanted is wide and varied, including old district watering spots, sit down places, sacred areas, trees and rocks, old photos or sketches of aboriginals and original weapons and tools.

Two elderly Kojonup men have given accounts of hockey matches played at Kojonup by natives about 60 or 70 years ago.

Jam sticks, heated in a fire, bent to the desired shape in the fork of a tree and left to cool were used, and the ball came from under the heart of a blackboy tree.

The aboriginals were said to have commenced the game with a bully, but that thereafter rules were virtually non-existent.

Casualties were common, both on the field and on the sidelines.

One of the most popular hockey fields was at Muradup, about 100 yards from the main pool, and as many as 150 natives have been seen there during a match. Another favourite ground was near the Kojonup cemetery.

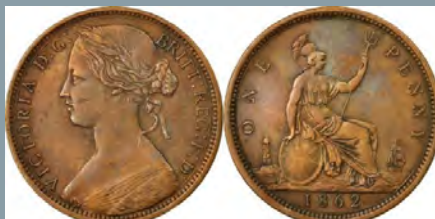

Many white settlers believed that the game was of aboriginal origin and not copied from the Europeans. However it is probable that the natives were taught by soldiers who had seen service in India, where hockey is the national game.

NEW FINDS AT OLD BARRACKS

Members of the Kojonup Historical Society and Apex Club made a thorough investigation of the Old Barracks during a busy bee last Saturday and made many interesting finds.

Upon the advice of Mr Charlie Elverd, whose family lived in the old barracks for many years, Apex Club members made a close inspection of the ceiling and found a large loft, used originally as sleeping quarters. The loft runs the full length and width of the building and has been preserved in excellent condition.

Historical Society secretary, Mrs Merle Bignell said the Society was now considering building a staircase to the loft when the building is opened as an historical museum.

The Apexians found in the loft a school counting board and table board, hand-made of wood. They are more than 50 years old.

Later in the afternoon, the front verandah flooring was lifted for repairs and replacements and more articles of historical value were found. Mrs P. Haggerty unearthed an 1862 penny — the oldest of several coins found — and among other items found were an old toy soldier and a very old thimble.

All the items will be displayed in the museum. Work on the improvement of the barracks is proceeding at a fast rate. Mr L. Treasure and Mr C. Elverd have spent a great deal of time burning up and clearing the grounds and the area was scarified by Kojonup Apexians last Saturday in readiness for the planting of gardens.

YEE HAW - its a Hillbilly Hoedown

at the 2022 Kojonup Show

CALLING ALL CRAFT MAKERS, HOBBYISTS, AND SMALL BUSINESS OWNERS

Having a stall to showcase your wares, hobby or crafts at the annual Kojonup Show is a perfect way to promote your skills or business for a next to nothing cost.

This year the Show Committee has decided to lower the cost of an indoor stall to $0... that's right ZERO for a table inside.
WHAT A BARGAIN!
if you need more than one x 1.8 table, your second table at a cost of $20.00 includes a gate pass. More Savings!

All site holders, inside and out, require their own Public Liability insurance, if you don't already hold any insurance you're able to purchase cover for one day, or for a full 12 months. There are several companies who provide one day market stall coverage, so you can use your Googler to compare prices or we can email you some links to several providers.

The booking form for all sites is readily available on our Website, kojonupshow.com.au or email: enquiries@kojonupshow.com.au and we will send you a copy.
